

I like Wisconsin's no-call list just the way it is. If I intended to do business with a company that I've done business with in the past, then I would do so. But to have them calling me, well, that would irritate me and I would NOT want to do business with them again. If I am that important to them they can send me a letter.